Admissions requirements

We welcome applicants without traditional entry qualifications as we base decisions on our own assessment of qualifications, knowledge and previous work experience. We may waive formal entry requirements based on judgement of academic potential.

UCAS tariff: 96-128 points, A levels – CCC-ABB (48 for Foundation Year entry)

The UCAS tariff score is applicable to you if you have recently studied a qualification that has a UCAS tariff equivalence. UCAS provides a tariff calculator for you to work out what your qualification is worth within the UCAS tariff.

Course aims

Are you drawn to storytelling on stage and screen? With BA Performance and Digital Arts at Birkbeck, study in central London, at the heart of the city's vibrant cultural scene. Investigate theatre as live event, as dramatic text and in its historical contexts, and how in different ways theatre and film practices shape the world.

You will explore theatre histories and theories in depth alongside the many ways in which it is possible to tell stories. From the perspectives of spectator and practitioner, you will examine theatre and screen media in context and test the intersections between the live and the recorded. Option modules offer you experience of other areas of the arts, literature, and languages, or the opportunity to produce your own creative work independently and in collaboration with others.

Throughout your degree, you will visit the world's most exciting theatre institutions and analyse live and digital performances. Your final full-length dissertation project examines a topic of your choosing under the guidance of our world-leading academics and specialists.

BA Performance and Digital Arts at Birkbeck brings you the best of both worlds of theatre and screen media.

This programme is also available for part-time evening study over four years, or with a foundation year.

Course aims:

- Enable students to develop knowledge and skills relating to theatre, film and media as specific domains of practice
- Offer a balanced programme of study that mixes compulsory modules and flexible option choice to enable students to engage with theatre, film and media in a range of contexts
- Develop students' understanding of the histories, conventions, and industries that pertain to theatre, film and media
- Extend students' awareness of the key elements of practice and production in theatre, filmmaking and media
- Develop students' skills of critical reflection upon individual practice and in group contexts
- Provide students with a broad understanding of processes of research, interpretation and analysis in practice-based and non-practice-based modes
- Offer students the intellectual tools to analyse and think critically about theatre, film and media culture and products and their histories, and to develop independent critical judgement

- Offer students the opportunity to undertake and complete an independent study project based in theatre, with an option to originate a creative piece
- Offer a balanced programme of study that mixes compulsory modules and flexible option choice to enable students to engage with theatre, film and media in a range of contexts
- Produce well-rounded graduates equipped with subject-specific and transferable knowledge and skills relevant to a range of sectors (including but not limited to arts and culture, education, law, marketing and public relations, charitable and third sector organisations, the public sector)

How you will learn

Your learning and teaching is organised to help you meet the learning outcomes (below) of the course. As a student, we expect you to be an active learner and to take responsibility for your learning, engaging with all of the material and sessions arranged for you.

Each course is divided into modules. You will find information on the virtual learning site (Moodle, see Academic Support below) about each of your modules, what to expect, the work you need to prepare, links to reading lists, information about how and when you will be assessed.

Your learning for this course will be organised around the activities outlined below.

Learning on BA Performance and Digital Arts makes use of a mix of techniques and strategies, including:

- Lectures
- Seminars
- Practice-based workshops and rehearsals
- Tutorial support
- Independent visits to theatrical performances^[1]
- Independent study and research
- Group-based study and research
- Access to public events hosted by Birkbeck Centre for Contemporary Theatre.

On theatre studies modules, students will learn primarily through the three key pedagogical practices central to Theatre and Performance at BA level: lectures, seminar discussions and workshops. Lectures provide students with key information regarding topics or themes.

Seminars are interactive, and involve students' advance preparation of materials, often focused by a series of set questions or prompts. Workshops enable students to explore the concepts they are introduced to in seminars and lectures through practice. This enables students to take a 'laboratory' approach, whereby they test and investigate practical strategies, effects and outcomes of theatre and performance through practice. This process of learning will be supplemented by independent research (involving the use of libraries, internet resources, and archives), independent individual and group work, and theatre visits.

On film and media studies modules, students will experience teaching styles which deliver a lecture and seminar together, a combination of presentation with student participation. Lectures take up a part of the class and then interactive discussion reinforces students' understanding of the subject of the lecture. This is achieved often through student analysis of film extracts and television programmes. Small group work is used and is designed to allow students to undertake focused tasks in a supportive environment so that they can develop their creative, analytical, communication and interpersonal skills. Discussion group work is designed to develop students' critical and analytical, presentation and communication skills. One-to-one tutorials develop student skills in presenting and discussing ideas verbally, and to engage in the construction of arguments through interaction with the tutor. Creative workshops are designed to combine the generation of creative ideas, alongside critical and interpersonal skills.

How we will assess you

The course will use a variety of assessment methods. Assessment is used to enhance your learning rather than simply to test it. For most of the modules associated with this course, your assessment will be through the following types of assessment.

Assessment methods include:

- Research essays
- Research exercises
- Performance presentations
- Creative projects
- Creative practice projects and exercises
- Creative practice portfolios
- Group presentations
- Critical reflections on practical work
- Group vivas (spoken examinations)
- Individual vivas (spoken examinations)

Learning outcomes (what you can expect to achieve)

'Learning outcomes' indicate what you should be able to know or do at the end of your course. Providing them helps you to understand what your teachers will expect and also the learning requirements upon which you will be assessed.

At the end of this course, you should be able to:

1. Demonstrate knowledge and understanding of the key traditions, conventions, contexts, histories, concepts, cultures and institutions that comprise theatre and film studies;
2. Show awareness of the range and variety of key critical and theoretical debates at the forefront of the fields of theatre and film studies;

3. Demonstrate knowledge and understanding of how the key elements and processes of theatrical performance and screen media are created and realised;
4. Demonstrate knowledge and understanding of the interplay between practice and theory;
5. Describe, theorise, interpret, analyse, historicise and evaluate cinematic and/or televisual texts, performance texts and performance events from a range of critical perspectives;
6. Utilise research skills, including the ability to gather, sift and organise material independently and critically and to present it in the form of an essay, report, presentation or creative piece
7. Discuss and evaluate the work of fellow students and established theatremakers and filmmakers in relation to elements of the craft of theatremaking and of film;
8. Work efficiently and constructively within a group and on an individual basis to realise an appropriate practice piece or presentation of a specified length;
9. Present and sustain arguments and engage in debate;
10. Act as a reflective, self-directed learner, recognizing and employing a range of strategies to support independent learning, including an awareness of strengths/weaknesses.
11. Communicate in public and in working groups with expressive clarity and sophistication;
12. Apply the expressive, critical and evaluative skills acquired during the programme to varied kinds of work;
13. Communicate ideas and arguments clearly in a variety of oral, written, visual and performance media;
14. Demonstrate some IT skills; the use of libraries and electronic sources of information, online discussion groups, web-based research, e-learning, word-processing;
15. Utilise bibliographical skills appropriate to the discipline, including accurate citation of sources and consistent use of conventions in the presentation of scholarly work.

Careers and further study

Employers highly value the analytical, critical, communicative, and interpersonal skills that a Birkbeck degree in Performance and Digital Arts can offer. Performance and Digital Arts graduates leave with valuable attributes such as:

- High-level oral and written communication skills in English
- The ability to work efficiently and effectively as part of a team and on an individual basis
- Research skills
- Skills in analysis and argumentation
- Skills in evaluating and assessing ideas and information
- The ability to articulate yourself clearly, cogently and persuasively

Birkbeck offers a range of careers support to its students. You can find out more on the careers pages of our website.

Academic regulations and course management

Birkbeck's academic regulations are contained in its Common Award Scheme Regulations and Policies published by year of application on the Birkbeck website.

You will have access to a course handbook on Moodle and this will outline how your course is managed, including who to contact if you have any questions about your module or course.

Support for your study

Your learning at Birkbeck is supported by your teaching team and other resources and people in the College there to help you with your study. Birkbeck uses a virtual learning environment called Moodle and each course has a dedicated Moodle page and there are further Moodle sites for each of your modules. This will include your course handbook.

Birkbeck will introduce you to the Library and IT support, how to access materials online, including using Moodle, and provide you with an orientation which includes an online Moodle module to guide you through all of the support available. You will also be allocated a personal tutor and provided with information about learning support offered within your School and by the College.

Please check our website for more information about student support services. This covers the whole of your time as a student with us including learning support and support for your wellbeing.

Quality and standards at Birkbeck

Birkbeck's courses are subject to our quality assurance procedures. This means that new courses must follow our design principles and meet the requirements of our academic regulations. Each new course or module is subject to a course approval process where the proposal is scrutinised by subject specialists, quality professionals and external representatives to ensure that it will offer an excellent student experience and meet the expectation of regulatory and other professional bodies.

You will be invited to participate in an online survey for each module you take. We take these surveys seriously and they are considered by the course team to develop both modules and the overall courses. Please take the time to complete any surveys you are sent as a student.

We conduct an annual process of reviewing our portfolio of courses which analyses student achievement, equality data and includes an action plan for each department to identify ongoing enhancements to our education, including changes made as a result of student feedback.

Our periodic review process is a regular check (usually every four years) on the courses by department with a specialist team including students.

Each course will have an external examiner associated with it who produces an annual report and any recommendations. Students can read the most recent external examiner reports on the course Moodle pages. Our courses are all subject to Birkbeck Baseline Standards for our Moodle module information. This supports the accessibility of our education including expectations of what information is provided online for students.

The information in this programme specification has been approved by the College's Academic Board and every effort has been made to ensure the accuracy of the information it contains.

Programme specifications are reviewed periodically. If any changes are made to courses, including core and/or compulsory modules, the relevant department is required to provide a revised programme specification. Students will be notified of any changes via Moodle.

Further information about specifications and an archive of programme specifications for the College's courses is available online.
